The Richmond Whig states that white servants and porters are rapidly taking the places of blacks in that city. The same is the case with the drivers of hacks and other vehicles, while at balls and parties German musicians have entirely supercaded the colored men. This is something new in Richmond, but it shows there has been a social as well as political revolution in the South.

Others of the delegation voted and acted as consistent secessionists throughout. They are now here acknowledging themselves defacted and spipingated. They ask nothing but predon and early action in appointing civil officers. The State is at present without law and its citizens are completely humbled; a fearful proportion of them are ilterally destitute of all means of support and starving.
